Sit-Up Test

Rationale: The one-minute sit-up test measures the muscular endurance of the abdominal muscles and hip-flexors. These muscles are used in bending, lifting and pulling, which are necessary in self-defense and high intensity arrest situations. These muscles are also important in performing a variety of tasks that involve use of force as well as routine tasks such as changing tires and maintaining good posture in motor vehicles.

Administration: Applicants start by lying on their backs, knees bent at a 90-degree angle, heels flat on the floor, hands cupped behind the head and fingers interlaced until the little fingers at least touch each other. In the up position, applicants must touch their elbows to their knees and then return to the supine position until the shoulder blades touch the floor. They may not raise their hips off the floor to gain momentum to perform the sit-up. The applicant must meet or exceed the minimum number of sit-ups required for his/her age group within one minute.

Push-Up / Modified Push-Up Test

Rationale: The one-minute push-up test measures the muscular endurance of the upper body muscles in the shoulders, chest and back of the upper arms (triceps). This type of muscle strength is important in use of force situations such as pushing, pulling, restraining, breaking one's fall, handcuffing and using a baton. In firearms operations, these muscles are used for holding a weapon on target for prolonged periods and repeatedly discharging a weapon.

Administration: Applicants start in the prone position, with palms of the hands directly in line with the outer edge of the shoulders, thumbs under the shoulders and arms extended. The feet may be either together or no more than eight inches apart, with toes touching the floor. The back and legs are rigid and in line from heels to shoulder blades to head. Applicants start in the up position and lower their body toward the floor with the back straight and rigid until the chest touches the three inch push-up block, and then push back up to the start position. The applicant must meet or exceed the minimum number of push-ups required for his/her age group within one minute.

Modified Push-Up Test: (optional only for females): The applicant starts with her knees on the floor and ankles crossed. Toes on the floor, with palms of the hands directly under the shoulders and arms extended. The shoulders, hips and knees are in line. The applicant starts in the up position and lowers her body toward the floor, with the back straight and rigid until the chest touches the push-up block, and then pushes back up to the start position. The applicant must meet or exceed the minimum number of push-ups required for her age group within one minute.

Sit and Reach Test

Rationale: This test measures the flexibility of the lower back and hamstring muscles. These muscles are used in bending, twisting, lifting, pushing, and pulling, all of which are necessary for self-defense, high intensity arrest situations, and firearms operations.

Administration: The applicant sits on the floor with legs extended; feet placed squarely against a box and no more than eight inches apart. A yardstick is placed between the legs and rests on the box with the 15-inch mark flush with the edge of the box. The applicant slowly reaches forward with both hands laid a top of one another, with minimal bending of the knees and holds the position for one second. A tube or rolled towel no more than two inches in diameter can be placed directly under the knees. The score is the furthest distance reached on the yardstick in the best of three attempts. The applicant must meet or exceed the minimum distance required for his/her age group.

1.5-Mile Run

Rationale: This test measures cardio-respiratory fitness, which is the ability to sustain exertion over an extended period. Cardio-respiratory fitness is necessary to engage in intensive, high stress self-defense tactics, use of force situations, and arrest situations.

Administration: Applicants run the prescribed 1.5-mile course in the fastest time possible. The score is determined by the time taken to complete the course. The applicant must complete the course in the time required or under the time required for his/her age group.

Montana Physical Abilities Test (MPAT)

The physical abilities test used by the MLEA is the Montana Physical Abilities Test (MPAT). MPAT is a hybrid physical ability/job sample physical abilities assessment process designed to evaluate law enforcement officer candidates on essential physical capacities required to satisfactorily perform job duties that are simulated or performed in the training environment.

The physical fitness tests are designed to measure the strength, flexibility and endurance law enforcement officers need to participate in and successfully complete those areas of training that require physical exertion.

Official documents certifying the applicant has successfully completed and passed the proctored Montana Law Enforcement Academy MPAT will meet the minimum acceptable level of the physical fitness performance requirement.

MPAT scores that are presented prior to the end of the current hiring process, which are six months old or less, will be sufficient to meet the minimum acceptable level of the physical fitness performance requirement.
